OMH is growing for our community’s future
By Keryn Thompson-Kolar

It’s been a long time coming.

Ground was broken July 27 for a $31.3 million expansion of the hospital’s Emergency Services and Surgical Pavilion. This project, which features more than $4 million in new equipment and furnishings, marks the beginning of huge changes for Onslow Memorial Hospital.

“This is the most significant healthcare event in this community in over 30 years,” said Ed Piper, president and CEO.

The hospital was built for about $6 million back in 1974, with its structure based on a ’50s and ’60s model. “People at that time came to an ER only for true trauma, for lifesaving emergencies,” Dr. Piper said. “People now demand a 24-hour walk-in clinic” that addresses their healthcare needs in a timely fashion. Currently, “we’re seeing over 120 patients a day in an ER designed for 80. There’s no room in the hospital to expand, so we have to go beyond the walls. And that means we build a new structure.”

The changes won’t stop at the bricks and mortar.

“We’re also trying to improve our people culture – the way the staff interacts with the public,” Dr. Piper said. “I always say that, other than a church, a hospital is the most sacred ground for a community. There’s no other place people come to seek peace, from a physical, mental and spiritual perspective.”

OMH’s goal is that patients “be well taken care of clinically, but also have a human experience that is healing to them.”

It will put some people’s minds at ease to hear that no tax money is being spent on the building project.

“The public needs to know that we at the Onslow County Hospital Authority are doing this on our own – not requiring any commitment of funds from our community,” Dr. Piper said.

Financing is coming from the recent sale of tax-exempt revenue bonds. Roy Smith, the hospital authority’s chief financial officer, said many people were surprised by the great demand for the bonds they were seeking to sell.

“There has been a tremendous interest in our bonds by institutional and private investors,” Smith said. “That resulted in a lower interest rate than expected – just 4.8 percent.

“I would like people in Onslow County to have a window into the outside world, to be able to see how others view this hospital. They see this hospital and this community as having a bright future, and they are confident enough to invest their capital.”

The bonds will be paid off with revenue generated by the hospital in years to come.

“It’s exciting, when you really stop to think about it,” said Penney Burlingame, senior vice-president, Clinical Services. “We are setting the pace for healthcare in the future. This gets it on a new track.”

She is particularly pleased with the streamlining of services that will occur because of the expansion plan. The design, she says, “addresses patient-flow issues from the time people walk through the door until they leave ... and it starts before they ever get out of their cars.”

That’s because patients and visitors will be able to park in the area of the service they’re seeking, so they “won’t have to traipse all over the hospital to get to where they need to be.”

Great gains usually come with some growing pains, but inconvenience to the public will be very limited during this expansion project, said Daniel T. Waller, Senior Vice President, Support Services.

“The new part of the building is going directly over a parking lot for staff, physicians and students,” Waller said. “The front parking area for visitors and patients is not being affected by the construction. There may be minor disruptions at times as entrances to lots are widened, but otherwise, public parking shouldn’t change.”

Drivers should be aware, though, that the service road connecting White Street to Memorial Drive behind the hospital will be closed during construction.

Completion of the building project is expected in July 2008.

“We aspire to be a great community hospital,” Dr. Piper said. “We are our brothers’ and sisters’ keepers – their safety net. We need a state-of-the-art facility for state-of-the-art care. We want to be a place that everyone in the community should be proud of.”

What will patients experience as a result of the building project?

- A new Emergency Room with more than double the current capacity
- Four larger and better-equipped operating rooms
- Separate waiting areas for the ER and outpatient services
- Bedside registration in the ER, to lessen wait times
- An enhanced triage space for major emergencies
- A larger area for treating minor emergencies (clinic-type services)
- Six observation beds in the ER, for monitoring patients up to 23 hours
- A family conference room in the ER for discussing sensitive patient-care issues
- Pre-op and post-op care in the same convenient location
- A central sterile supply area situated so as to increase efficiency and speed up service
- Eventually, the old OR and recovery areas could be used for outpatient care, conveniently locating all such services (such as endoscopy) on the first floor. Also, there will be space available to have CT and other radiology services in the ER at some point in the future.
In a year, they put in nearly 20,000 hours of work to help make OMH the best hospital it can be. And for their efforts they earn not a cent of pay.

“They” are the members of the OMH Auxiliary. They spend their time on fund-raising, teen training, and lending support to OMH staff in a variety of ways.

“The volunteers are so important to the ongoing success of the hospital,” said Tim Strickland, director of public relations. “These are selfless and caring people who go out of their way to serve our patients in meaningful ways. We just can’t express our appreciation often enough, nor can we fully measure the difference they make on behalf of everyone in the community.”

About 80 adults and 44 teenagers currently make up the group. The oldest member is 94 and still volunteering on a weekly basis. “Anybody could do this if they just have a commitment to it,” said Martha Danford, who is in her third year as Auxiliary president. “The volunteers are special, and keeping them happy is what makes me happy.”

Raising money for the hospital is one of the group’s most time-consuming activities. This year’s efforts centered on running the Gift Shop; encouraging outside contributions through Tree of Hope, a Christmas giving program; and selling such items as uniforms, books, jewelry and cookware.

One change this year was the addition of a payroll deduction option for staff members who wished to purchase Gift Shop items. “That has gone over very well,” Martha said.

“Each year we give a contribution to the hospital. This year, we gave $53,272.”

But the Auxiliary gave more than just money. It spread goodwill in small ways, too. The group gave a special welcome basket to the first baby to be born at OMH in 2006. Its members knitted and crocheted tiny caps in which to send other newborns home. And those patients hospitalized on Christmas Day received favors on their meal trays, “to bring a little cheer to them.”

Other tasks are more mundane, but important. “Taking care of receptionist-type duties relieves the paid employees of those tasks,” Martha said.

“We man the front desk, saving on hospital salaries,” she said. “The Volunteers are trained to work on the floors, in rehab, in the labs, in X-ray … different tasks to help out” during their summer break.

She said it has proved especially helpful having Auxiliary members act as go-betweens for surgeons and the families who are waiting in the OR lounge. “That’s been a very good and well-received service that we’ve installed,” Martha said.

Encouraging young people to pursue careers in the healthcare field is important to the Auxiliary, which is why it contributes $4,000 annually to fund four scholarships at Coastal Carolina Community College. Members also manage the Nancy Coté Scholarship Fund.

Efforts to recognize and thank the volunteers led to the creation this year of a “Volunteer of the Year” award. Vicki Heffernan, the first winner, was honored at the group’s annual awards luncheon. A plaque bearing her name and photo can be seen in the hospital lobby.

When asked what keeps the Auxiliary going strong, Martha didn’t hesitate. “If you like people and you like to give of yourself, this is where you want to be,” she said. “I think the majority of us feel it’s a way we can give back to humanity, to our fellow man. It gives us a good feeling to be doing for somebody else.”
OMH financially responsible
By Keryn Thompson-Kolar

The reports are in, and they indicate a clean bill of health for Onslow Memorial Hospital.

An organization is in the pink only if its finances are in the black, and that’s the case for OMH, as seen in its most recent annual financial statement. Roy Smith, chief finance officer for the Hospital Authority, is pleased with the results.

“2005 represents the fourth year in a row that the hospital authority has generated revenues in excess of expenses,” he said. “OMH had a strong year financially and continues the trend we’ve seen in the past four years of improving its financial performance.”

This is especially significant considering that OMH is self-supporting, with revenues coming solely from patient care.

“Many people don’t realize that the hospital is a stand-alone non-profit organization,” said Tim Strickland, director of public relations. “It operates under the auspices of the Onslow County Hospital Authority, but it is not supported by county funds.”

The Hospital Authority board members are appointed by the Onslow County Commissioners. So, even though it receives no tax funding, Onslow is a public hospital, which means patients are not turned away because of an inability to pay.

It’s encouraging to everyone at OMH that more people are choosing Onslow for their care, and that has helped solidify the hospital’s financial position. Because the hospital is not a for-profit operation, “we don’t have stockholders, we just have a community that we serve,” Smith said.

Any leftover money at the end of the fiscal year is reinvested in the hospital. This is done by adding the latest medical equipment, hiring well-qualified staff and improving the facilities.

OMH financially responsible
By Keryn Thompson-Kolar

Structural changes soon will be very visible, as OMH is embarking on a dramatic expansion of its facility. This $40 million building project will result in bigger and better emergency and surgical services departments. (See pages 4-5 for more information about the expansion.)

Strickland said community support of the expansion is critical.

“Having quality local healthcare is a key ingredient in the quality of life for all area residents,” he said. “Everyone in the community should cherish the hospital, support it, and demand that it constantly improve.”

Onslow’s current goals, Smith said, are “investing more, bringing equipment up, and building some cash reserves so that it has the ability to weather storms.”
‘A big ol’ superstar’
By Keryn Thompson-Kolar

Six-year-old Matthew feels like “a big ol’ superstar,” says his mother, Michelle. The TV, radio and print ads telling the story of Matthew’s twice-broken arm have made him a celebrity among his friends and neighbors in Jacksonville.

Participating in the recent OMH advertising campaign “was a blast,” Michelle said. “The entire family had a great time. Matthew loved it. He went and bragged to all his friends.”

The family especially enjoyed the upbeat attitude of the production crew during the filming and photo shoot. It was the same attitude that Matthew and his mom had found so reassuring in the OMH Emergency Room a year before.

When he was being X-rayed and fitted with his first cast, “everybody was really friendly and joking around,” Michelle said. “They took us through it as quickly as they possibly could.”

And a few months later, when Matthew was back in the ER with a different broken bone — in the same arm, no less — the OMH staff kidded with him about it. “They kept Matthew at ease, and that was important to me as a parent,” Michelle said.

“I’ve had experiences with another hospital in the area that frustrated me,” she said. But “after that positive first experience (with Matthew’s arm), we were happy to go back to OMH” for the second cast.

And that led to Matthew getting a third cast: a fake one, to wear in the ad pictures. “The crew was really funny,” his mom said. “They even signed his cast before they cut it off,” and gave it to him as a way to always remember his time in the spotlight. The autographs laud Matthew’s star quality.

“Matthew didn’t keep either of the original casts, but he wanted to keep this one,” Michelle said.
When she came to OMH in 2005 seeking treatment for breast cancer, Dorothy, a retiree who lives in Richlands, had no idea where it would lead. Her successful lumpectomy and radiation therapy are now being touted all over the area as part of the hospital’s public relations campaign.

The TV commercial filming and photo shoot at Dorothy’s home took about eight hours altogether, stretched over two days. Dorothy found it to be “tiring, but kind of exciting. ... With my husband being with me, and being in it, it was really, really fun.”

When she later saw the ad on TV, “I said, ‘Wow!’ I couldn’t believe it ... it was put together so unique, especially knowing the pictures they took and all the time they put into it. It was just amazing; I had no idea it would turn out like that.”

The outdoor advertising really floored her. “It’s weird seeing myself on the billboard — I’m out here for the world to see!”

People in the community are taking notice, too. At church, her minister saw Dorothy and her husband walk in, and announced to the congregation, “We have two celebrities in the house!”

“That was my main purpose.”

A bigger reason for doing it was her experience with her surgeon, Timothy Patselas, MD. “He's really my idea of a doctor. He never seemed to be in a rush and was willing to explain any questions I had to ask him. ... He’s a jewel.” She said that caring attitude also was reflected by “everybody I came in contact with at that hospital.”

But the most important reason of all to participate in the OMH ad campaign became clear to Dorothy later, when a waitress at her favorite restaurant came over to her table. “She told me that that commercial — and what I had to say — made her go and get a mammogram.

“Halle Berry, eat your heart out,” Dorothy told a friend later.

So what makes a normally private person do such big things? That would be a persuasive phone call from Tim Strickland, OMH’s director of public relations. “He’s very jovial — the kind that you can’t say no to. That’s how I got involved.”
‘A great job of healing me’
By Keryn Thompson-Kolar

Tana is an old hand at appearing in TV ads. She’s been on camera before, in a commercial for a grocery store where she used to help manage the floral department.

The ad she did for OMH, though, is more special. This time, her co-star is a dear pal — it’s her Labrador retriever, Cole.

Cole had to be in the ad, she said, because “he’s the reason for the whole thing.” It was while exercising the energetic, 35-pound puppy that she was pulled to the ground and suffered a compound fracture of the left clavicle. That’s how she ended up in the Onslow ER … and how she ended up appearing in ads for the hospital, along with her furry friend.

Tana said she would have liked to share the spotlight with her orthopedic surgeon. “Dr. Joel McClurg … took great care of me the whole, entire time. He did a great job of healing me.”

That’s what made her want to be part of the project. And she was pleased to discover that, this time around, acting in a TV ad was all play and no work. The cameras rolled as she romped with Cole.

“It was much easier not having to speak. It was just play and have fun. … We had to wait on the weather to cooperate, but the people were wonderful.

“I think my dog enjoyed it most of all.”

And did she enjoy shopping for an outfit to wear in the photos, courtesy of the advertising budget? “Darn right I did — that was a bonus!”

Tana’s comfortable with seeing herself on television, but more importantly, she enjoys seeing Cole. “He’s a handsome devil.”
‘She’s our miracle’

By Keryn Thompson-Kolar

New parents are always eager to record their baby’s “firsts.” First steps, first tooth ...

First television commercial ...

At just 9 months of age, Elizabeth got to have her bright eyes and chubby cheeks put on display for all to see. In her video footage and ad photos, she’s a giggling picture of health — which is a far cry from her condition upon arrival, 11 weeks premature, at OMH.

“It’s a great experience to drive around town and see your daughter everywhere” on billboards, said Elizabeth’s mother, Alicia, of Jacksonville. “Then you watch TV, and there she is again!”

Of course, Elizabeth will have no memories of her debut acting gig. She won’t recall the film crew members who “were very accommodating to her. They worked around her nap schedule, around her feeding schedule. We had so much fun,” Alicia said.

Elizabeth’s dad, Josh, was home from military duty in Iraq and got to appear on camera with his precious girl. He cherishes his time with her, since he was overseas when she was born and missed her 43 days in Onslow’s Neonatal Intensive Care Unit.

“She’s our miracle’

By Keryn Thompson-Kolar

It also gives her daughter a special addition to the usual childhood keepsakes. “Tim (Strickland) gave me copies of everything,” Alicia said. “It’s all on DVD. We have it for the rest of our lives to show her that she was famous. Elizabeth will have something that the other kids definitely won’t have.”

Alicia and Josh are grateful for something that Elizabeth won’t have — lingering health problems from her early start in life. “She’s right where she should be,” Alicia said.

With a preemie, “you worry more than the average parent. But she’s worth it. She’s our miracle.”
A full-time hospitalist program is helping OMH physicians in the care of their patients.

In partnership with Eagle Hospital Physicians, the OMH hospitalist program is designed as a benefit for OMH patients as well as their primary-care physicians. The beginning of the service on June 14 marked the successful conclusion of a collaborative planning process between OMH, the medical staff, and Eagle.

The hospitalist physicians are internists who are dedicated to OMH’s inpatients. The hospitalist service is available 24 hours a day, seven days a week, to admit and attend to inpatients who are referred by their personal physicians. Because the hospitalists focus solely on inpatient care, they have no office practices.

The hospitalists can be on-call to care for patients who come into the ER and for consultation on medical management of inpatients as requested by primary care or specialist physicians. The hospitalists also provide support to nursing staff and work collaboratively with case management staff at OMH.

In the hospital, they provide care for patients, as well as information for families. Patients are discharged to referring primary care physicians.

OMH President and Chief Executive Officer Ed Piper, Ph.D., describes the program as a team approach.

“The hospitalist services are designed to work in partnership with the primary care and specialty physicians at OMH and from nearby communities,” Dr. Piper said. “We want to provide high-quality supportive services for everyone involved. Having hospitalists allows physicians to access the comprehensive services provided at OMH and maintain their patient relationships.”

Today, there are more than 12,000 hospitalists practicing across the country, according to the Society for Hospital Medicine. The OMH program is designed to further the hospital’s commitment to provide the scope and quality of services which best meet the needs of our community.
OMH finds many ways to give
By Tim Strickland

As a 501(c)3 charitable organization, Onslow Memorial Hospital has a strong commitment to succeed in its role in benefiting the community it serves.

Led by the Onslow County Hospital Authority Board and Executive Team, OMH plays an extremely important role as a healthcare safety net for all area residents. On any given day, hundreds of patients receive high-quality hospital services regardless of their ability to pay. In the most recent fiscal year, this resulted in a total of more than $1 million in charity care. This is in addition to the more than $11 million in unreimbursed costs for treating Medicaid patients.

Another significant charitable endeavor is OMH’s strong support for the local Caring Community Clinic, which provides free outpatient health services to low-income residents. OMH provides $24,000 annually in operating capital as well as much more support in the form of in-kind contributions, including free space for the clinic and diagnostic and clinical support.

OMH’s Education Department plays a coordinative role for the Clinical and Nursing Divisions in their numerous outreach efforts. As a public service, hospital personnel regularly attend events at which area residents receive health education and screenings at no charge.

In light of the nationwide shortage in healthcare workers, OMH is taking a leadership role in encouraging Onslow County’s youth to consider and prepare for careers in this rewarding field. An example of this leadership is the $21,000 in annual scholarships for high-performing seniors graduating from the county’s high schools.

The people of OMH are proud to provide these and many other benefits for the people of our community. These benefits demonstrate that OMH truly is a place Where People Care.
